The Grand Theft Auto series is a series of open-world action-adventure video games developed and published by Rockstar San Diego. The games are driven by player choices such as the player's actions, their in-game characters' decisions, and the player's progression through the game's story. Grand Theft Auto is known for its over-the-top violence, humorous dialogue, frequent use of sex and profanity, open-ended gameplay, and use of advanced technology. Grand Theft Auto IV (pronounced /'gʌnd tɒɪ ɡɑ:t ɡʌt ɑ:v/, ['gɒnd 'tɑ:g 'ɑ:t ɡʌt, 'gɒnd 'tɑ:g 'ɑ:t, 'gʌnd 'tɑ:g 'ɑ:t] or Australian game terminology) is a open world action-adventure video game developed and published by Rockstar North and Rockstar San Diego, developed with the support of Rockstar London. It was released worldwide for the Microsoft Windows, PlayStation 3, and Xbox 360 on April 17, 2008, in North America and on April 20, 2008, in Europe. The game revolves around Niko Bellic, a Bosnian Serb who moves to Liberty City to seek his fortune. There, Niko meets the FIB, a private contract law enforcement agency, and becomes allied with the C.R.A., the rival of the FIB, against the R*A*P*E*S, a gang of Serbian mafia, led by the Serbian mafia leader, Vinko Culina. A software distributor that contracts their software from an original equipment manufacturer (OEM) may not be able to transfer the software to a new computer without paying an additional fee. Most software distributors that distribute consumer-oriented software, such as games, are referred to as OEMs because they are licensed by the OEM to distribute their software. Unlike free distribution, OEM distribution is typically designed to ensure that software that was loaded or installed on a computer system can be activated and used in the same condition that it was in when it was used. OEM software distributors retain responsibility for tracking whether the software has been activated and in which manner (e.g., whether it

Butter producing dairy farmers are preparing for an EU directive on counterfeiting beef to come into effect from next year. Around 70% of the meat eaten in the UK is imported, and one in six of those come from Ireland. Those with the expertise to make falsifications are being forced to exit the EU, potentially throwing thousands of farming jobs in Northern Ireland out of kilter.

However, some experts have warned Northern Ireland is being badly left behind the rest of the UK by the decision. There will be a total ban on the sale of certain meat products by foreign firms. "It will be a huge disaster and if you look at what's going to happen across the rest of the UK, some of them are going to be much more impacted than we will be," said Kevin Johnston, the chairman of the Northern Ireland Agri Food Federation. "A lot of people are going to be saying 'you've only got one province, shouldn't you have been consulted?'. "We've got no voice at all and we're going to be having to fight these battles and there's not enough of us." The production of beef is to be banned in some places of the EU. The Agri Food Federation says that if European sales of meat are lost to foreign producers, significant numbers of dairy farmers will be in peril. "I think this really highlights the fact that Northern Ireland is just a small corner of the UK
